Colombo City Hotel rises to six floors and with the exception of the value added rooms, situated inside is also a conference hall, outfitted to host up to 200 guests for any occasion, with all the facilities to hold a first class conference/seminar or wedding reception that would match any five star venue at a fraction of the cost. Further, way up at the opposite end, the rooftop houses a quaint little restaurant that is partially opened to the city sky. Theme nights at the restaurant, every Wednesday and Friday, host flavours from the world over and live bands keep the entertainment flowing. “Daily, we have a big crowd. People, mainly from the surrounding corporate offices, queue up for lunch, as the hotel’s value for money is not just limited to the accommodation,” adds Mathew.

Having won the Agoda Gold Circle award in 2011, Colombo City Hotel liberates a magnetic location for conveniences, “and that is why we have such a large occupancy rate here. We are at the city’s centre while being a budget friendly hotel at the same time,” states Mathew. In addition, “we keep our environment, not only within the hotel, but also the outdoors, extremely clean and well maintained. Furthermore, being eco friendly the hotel has switched all public areas and rooms to energy saving three watt LED lights and the newly refurbished rooms come with inverter AC’s,” he adds on the hotel’s Corporate Social Responsibility to the city of Colombo.

“The hotel is situated right in the financial hub of the city centre, just opposite the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center and adjoining the recently opened shopping and dining mall, the Dutch Hospital Precinct,” says Mathew. Thus, if you’re hopeful of a well-deserved trip to the commercial capital, then there is such a thing as
