MLH Staff Trained In First Aid

Posted on

Anura Dewapura, General Manager of the Mount Lavinia Hotel and Donnie Woodyard Jr, Managing Director and CEO of Med1, flanked by MLH and Med1 teams

Mount Lavinia Hotel is the first hotel in Sri Lanka to initiate emergency medical training of international standards for its staff, consisting of more than seven hundred people. Professional instructors attached to Med1, a healthcare development company that provides professional and comprehensive emergency healthcare services to Sri Lanka, have trained the staff.

“We place a premium on the health and safety of every guest that walks through the doors of the Mount Lavinia Hotel,” stated Anura Dewapura, General Manager of the Mount Lavinia Hotel. “In accordance with international accreditations and standards, every one of the more than seven hundred staff of the Mount Lavinia Hotel will be trained and certified in CPR and First Aid.”

In the words of Donnie Woodyard Jr, Managing Director and CEO of Med1, “Properly trained first responders often are the difference between life and death in a medical emergency. It is essential to develop the confidence, knowledge and skills required to respond immediately in the case of a medical emergency.“