

Earthcheck is used by travel and tourism organisations around the world to confirm their carbon claims and guide their sustainability initiatives.

It is the largest benchmarking, certification and management solution in use by the tourism industry and the leading programme in market.

For these reasons Earthcheck was seen as the best fit for Mount Lavinia Hotel (MLH). “We understand sustainability requires a long-term view from our business, a long-term view that takes into consideration the needs of future generations today,” stated Anura Dewapura, General Manager, Mount Lavinia Hotel.

The hotel uses biocides, instead of harmful pesticides in the premises and environment of the property, and initiated several green programmes.
