As guests descend the staircase leading to the extensive garden of the Bungalow, they are greeted with the majestic sight of the Seven Virgin Hills dominating the sky while the Laxapana waterfall appears as a thin ribbon amongst the lush greenery. Despite the distance, the roar of the cascade can be heard easily, heightening the experience.

“It was designed as a plantation bungalow,” said Natasha Amaratunge, proprietor, Norton Grange Bungalow. The two-story vacation home is constructed against the slope of a hill, with only the first floor visible from the garden. The guests enter through the doors of the Bungalow to a long corridor, which opens into the living/dining area. The spacious home comprises four bedrooms – two master bedrooms and two double rooms- with en suite bathrooms, a TV room, and two living rooms.
