Siam House recognised at City Food Safety High Achievers’ Awards

Posted on
‘A Star’ trophy won by Siam House

Siam House Thai Restaurant in Colombo was awarded an “A Star” at the Food Safety High Achievers’ Awards Ceremony. This mark of recognition was presented for having maintained a high level in public health standards.

The event was organised by the Public Health Department of the Colombo Municipal Council to recognise the hotels and restaurants within the city of Colombo that have maintained the highest standards of food safety.

The award ceremony was held under the auspices of the Chief Guest John Amaratunga, Minister of Tourism Development and Christian Religious Affairs and Dr Ruwan Wijayamuni, Chief Medical Officer of Health, City of Colombo.

Siam House has proudly served authentic Thai cuisine to Colombo’s food lovers since 1993. Along with Thai classics, the menu boasts a selection of original as well as unique dishes created and perfected by the restaurant’s Thai Chef and his energetic team.

Since its inception, the authentic Thai restaurant has strived for quality and consistency.

"Our goal is to provide trust in every bite by maintaining an industry-leading programme that minimises the food safety risk for customers wherever possible," said Lionel Fernando, Managing Director, Siam House Thai Restaurant. He further stated that "Operating a great restaurant that meets the highest food safety standards is a central part of our commitment to our patrons."