The talk in towns, homes, hospitals and even social media is how to live healthy and keep fit. This trend has led to people concentrating on what they eat. Well if there is one food you should know about, to help keep you fit and healthy it's the Moringa tree and best yet this wonder is grown naturally right here in Sri Lanka. Best grown on the northern and eastern part of Sri Lanka between October through till December.

What you need to know about the Moringa tree? It's also known as the drumstick tree, horseradish tree and the miracle tree. It grows quickly in a tropical climate in full sun, up to 12m in height. It has whitish-grey corky bark, pale green 'feathery' leaves, perfumed creamy-white flowers, long pods also known as the (drumsticks) that turn brown when mature and dark brown seeds. Benefits of the Moringa tree? It is part of the normal diet in Sri Lanka and is gaining popularity in the Western world, where it is claimed to be a 'superfood'. The young shoots, flowers and young seed pods are high in antioxidants, vitamins, and vital nutrients, and are commonly added to soups and curries. The leaves are used to make herbal tea, or can be dried and crushed to a powder, which can be taken in capsules. The root can be peeled and grated as a substitute for horseradish. The oil extracted from mature seeds is said to have anti-fungal properties, and may be included in creams and soaps. Wondering how to cook and eat Moringa?
